JDC Duty-free Shop: Building a Sustainable Future

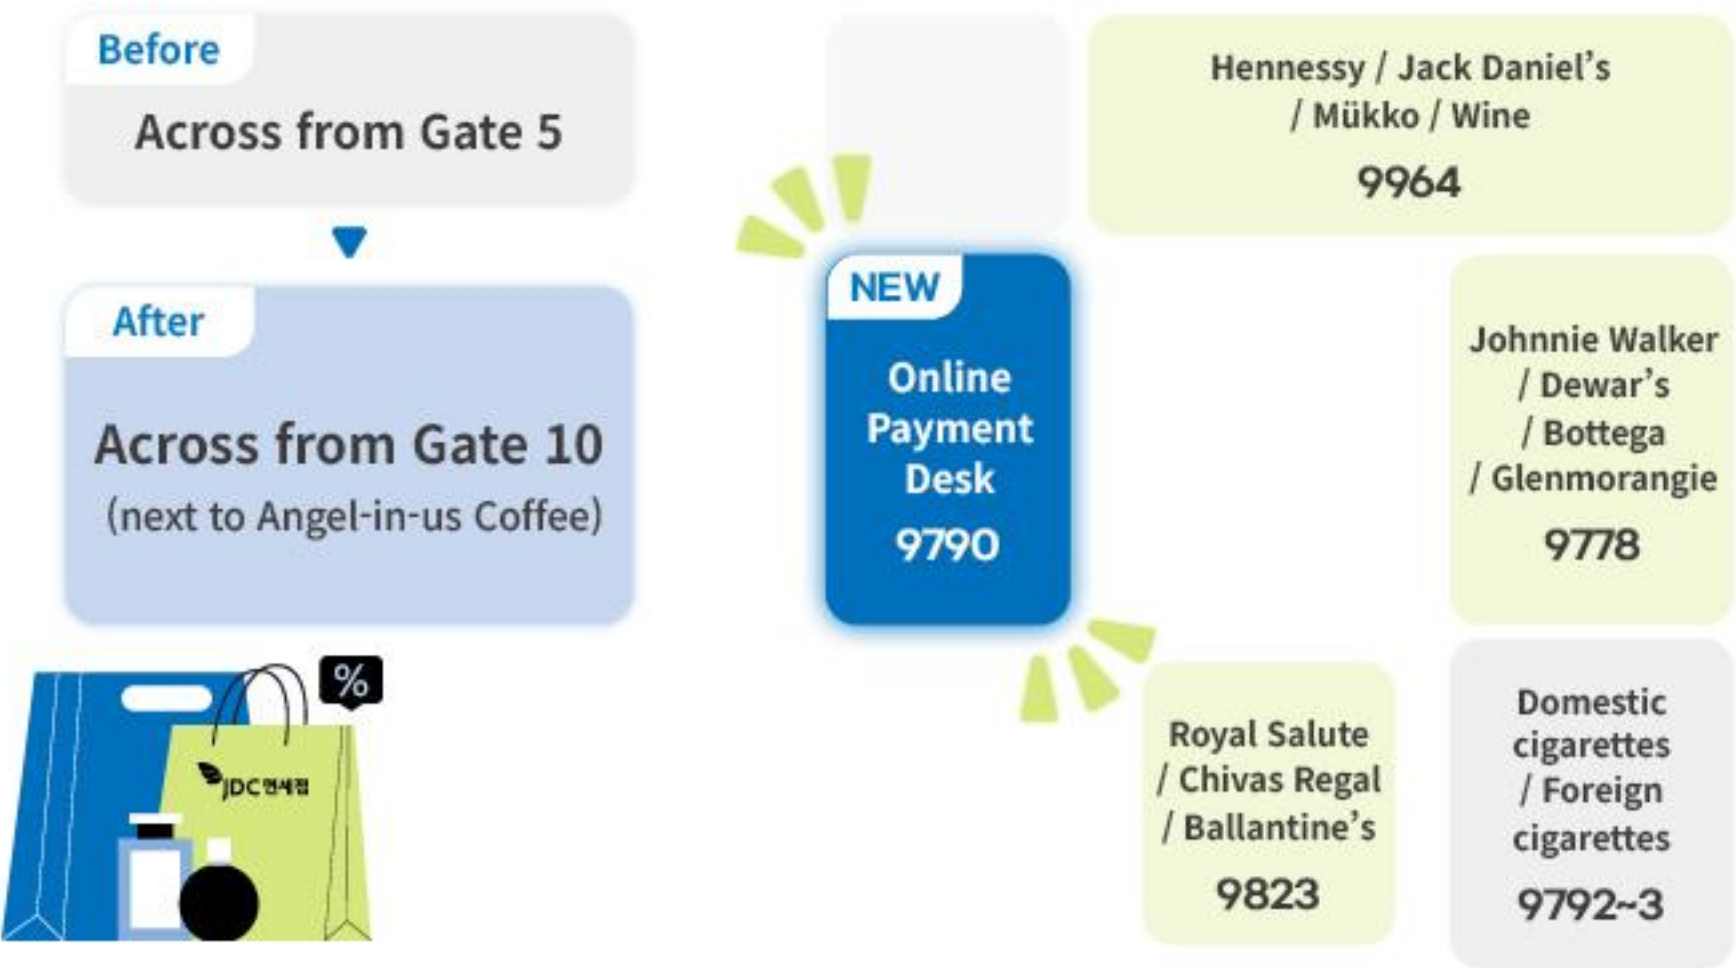

The JDC Duty-free Shop has begun a broad set of initiatives aimed at strengthening customer convenience and advancing social value. These efforts range from digital transformation that creates a smarter shopping experience to environmental programs that help protect Jeju and support for local artists. At Jeju Airport, the duty-free shop is becoming more than a retail space. It is evolving into a place where customers, the local community, and the environment can grow together, creating new value beyond traditional expectations.

Wider and More Convenient: A Fresh New Look After Store Renovation

The JDC Duty-free Shop has redesigned its Jeju Airport location to enhance the customer experience and strengthen sales performance. The most notable change is the relocation of the online payment desk to the west-side store. The desk had previously been situated in the central store, and its move to the front of the west-side store has opened roughly sixty-three square meters of new retail space in the central area. This adjustment achieves two important goals at the same time. It revitalizes the west-side store, which had seen relatively low foot traffic, and it enables more efficient use of space in the central store.

Online Desk Location

The newly created area will be used to expand the liquor and sunglasses sections, both high-value product categories. The liquor section, which generates twenty percent of total sales but had been limited to only 6.76 percent of the floor space while carrying more than ninety brands, will finally have adequate room to operate. The sunglasses section is also being enlarged, making it possible to bring in additional brands.

The improved customer flow through category consolidation is equally noteworthy. The toy section has moved to the entrance front to increase customer traffic, while fashion items have been gathered in one location to enhance shopping convenience.

The renovation covered every part of the facility, including interior construction, mechanical systems, electrical work, information and communication systems, and fire safety. It was carried out in three phases to minimize any impact on sales. Through this reconfiguration, the JDC Duty-free Shop aims to achieve meaningful sales growth through physical expansion and an efficient layout.

Shopping That Gives: Partnership with The Salvation Army

JDC Duty-free Shop and The Salvation Army have begun a special collaboration to help protect Jeju's environment. After signing a business agreement on November 7, 2025, the two organizations introduced an innovative fundraising system using digital charity kettles.

JDC Duty-free Shop-Salvation Army Special Fundraising Campaign MOU Ceremony

This fundraising system, which uses NFC tag technology, allows customers to make donations with a simple tap of their smartphone. NFC tags have been placed at key points throughout the store, including the liquor, cigarette, and sunglasses sections in the central store and at the entrance, as well as the online payment desks in both the east and west stores. Without downloading an app or following any complicated steps, customers can support environmental protection in Jeju with just a tap of their phone. Partnering with The Salvation Army, which has a 117-year legacy of charitable service, ensures both transparency and expertise. Donations will be divided equally between JDC and The Salvation Army, with each organization applying the funds in its respective area of specialization. JDC will support environmental improvement projects in Jeju, while The Salvation Army will plan and implement local welfare programs.

This agreement is a strong example of a participatory ESG initiative that links consumer activity with charitable giving in a natural way. It allows duty-free shop customers to support environmental protection in Jeju simply by making their usual purchases. JDC plans to produce promotional materials and launch its fundraising activities from December 2025 through January 2026.

The Breath of Young Artists at JDC Duty-free Shop

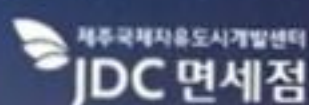

The desire to protect Jeju's natural environment has come together with art. JJDC Duty-free Shop held a special exhibition titled "Containing Jeju," presenting Jeju's wind, sea, stone, and light through the eyes of young Jeju artists. The exhibition ran for about one month, from October 16 to November 13, 2025, at the entrance of the duty-free shop in Jeju International Airport, in front of Gate 7. The exhibition featured works chosen through the "2024 JDC-Jeju Culture and Arts Foundation Young Jeju Artists Open Call," displayed in a space of approximately thirteen square meters.

Additionally, customers who spent above a designated amount received a limited-edition postcard set featuring five selected artworks, offered on a first-come, first-served basis. In the space where art appreciation, shopping, and value-driven support for Jeju’s environment come together naturally, JDC Duty-free Shop’s cultural and environmental message stood out even more clearly.

Through this exhibition, JDC Duty-free Shop strengthened both differentiated customer experience and in-store traffic, while also supporting young Jeju artists and advancing its ESG initiatives. It stands as a symbolic example of the duty-free shop’s commitment to growing beyond a simple commercial space into one that respects Jeju’s natural environment and cultural arts.

A Paperless Duty-free Shop: Protecting the Environment Through Digital Innovation

On October 22, 2025, JDC Duty-free Shop ended the use of paper receipts across all stores and introduced an electronic receipt system. This change is a key step toward fulfilling its management vision of preserving Jeju’s environment.

According to the Ministry of Environment, approximately 12.8 billion paper receipts are issued each year in Korea. Producing them requires cutting down more than 120,000 trees and results in about 22,000 tons of carbon dioxide emissions. With the introduction of electronic receipts, JDC Duty-free Shop expects to eliminate roughly 6.3 million paper receipts annually and reduce carbon dioxide emissions by an estimated 15.8 tons.

Customer convenience has not been overlooked. Customers can view their purchase details on their mobile devices at checkout without installing an app or registering as a member, and the worry of losing a receipt is gone. Managing records has also become much easier. Digital transformation does not stop here. Since October 2025, JDC Duty-free Shop has introduced Naver Pay, Korea's leading mobile payment service. With eighteen million monthly users, accounting for about 33 percent of the Korean population, Naver Pay is expected to attract more customers from younger and mobile-focused consumer groups. The service operates through the existing VAN system without additional fees, and payments can be made easily by scanning a QR code with a barcode scanner.

A New Digital Service Channel for Brands: Innovation in the Application System

JDC Duty-free Shop has overhauled its brand application system to better attract new partners. In addition to the previous proposal process that operated only during designated announcement periods, the updated system now allows brands to submit proposals at any time throughout the year.

This allows brands to submit proposals at any time, enabling JDC to respond quickly to market trends and bring in competitive partners. A learning organization made up of internal specialists has improved the transparency and efficiency of the review process by creating an interface that is easy for both users and administrators to navigate. The system also provides real-time updates on each stage of the process, from initial guidance to proposal review and subsequent progress. By integrating the previous system with the main JDC website server, cost savings are also expected. Beginning in January 2026, a new digital service (<https://imp.jdcdutyfree.com>) will launch, making it easier for JDC Duty-free Shop and prospective brands to connect.

From store renovation to digital transformation, collaboration with the arts, and social contribution, JDC Duty-free Shop is moving toward three goals: customer convenience, environmental protection, and the creation of social value. JDC duty-free shop is evolving beyond a retail space into a place that helps shape Jeju's future. 🌊

Smarter, More Jeju,
and More Customer-Focused

Son Bong-soo,
Head of Duty-free
Business Division

As JDC Duty-free Shop marks its twenty-third anniversary, it is preparing for a major renewal and a new phase of growth. Son Bong-soo, Head of the Duty-free Business Division, has set a clear direction: “Smarter, More Jeju, and More Customer-Focused.” He expressed his ambition for the duty-free shop to evolve into a leading public brand that contributes to Jeju tourism and the local economy through digital innovation and strengthened regional value. We spoke with him about the new values JDC Duty-free Shop is creating, from redesigning store space to eco-friendly policies and support for young local artists.

Hello, Mr. Son. Could you briefly introduce yourself?

I joined JDC in June 2002 as one of its founding members. At the time, I worked in the Operations Team of the Sales Division, preparing for the opening of the duty-free shop. Since then, I have held roles in the Audit Office and the Human Resources Office, and later served as head of several departments, including Product Planning, Education City, and Planning and Coordination. I also served as CEO of JEINS Co., Ltd., a JDC subsidiary that operates international schools. Since January of this year, I have been serving as Head of the Duty-free Business Division.

JDC Duty-free Shop is undergoing a renewal. What does this makeover mean?

This renewal is more than a change in layout. I see it as a new starting point for JDC Duty-free Shop to move up to the next level.

For some time, we have faced declining sales, limited floor space, and congested customer flow, which created inconvenience for our customers. It became clear that we needed to optimize how the space is used and create a more comfortable shopping environment. Although there were many constraints, we focused on improving efficiency within the space we have and looked for ways to break through and boost sales.

One of the major changes was relocating the online desk from the central store to the west store. This created about sixty-three square meters of new retail space in the central area. We also placed the online desk at the front of the west store and set up dedicated sections for liquor and cigarettes.

In the newly created central space, we expanded the liquor section. Liquor accounts for twenty-two percent of our sales, the highest among all categories, yet the space allocated to it was very limited. With this expansion, we expect smoother customer movement and plan to bring in four new liquor companies, which should contribute meaningfully to sales.

We also moved fashion brands located near the liquor section to the fashion area to consolidate the category and improve customer flow. The toy sections, Kakao and Zannang Loopy, which had been operated separately, were placed together at the front of the central store to increase customer engagement.

To help recover declining sales of red ginseng products, which have high unit prices, we placed them prominently at the front of the central store. We expect this to improve both sales volume and average purchase amounts.

Lastly, we relocated and expanded the sunglasses section to the former online desk area. This will allow us to bring in new sunglasses brands and improve convenience for customers.

Overall, through expanded physical space, a more efficient layout, and the attraction of new brands, we expect this renewal to lead to real sales growth.

With the November reopening, especially with the store reconfiguration, what are your expectations?

First, we expect higher customer satisfaction. By expanding the floor area of the central store, which has the highest traffic, we can improve accessibility and overall shopping convenience. With a more balanced placement of brands, the purchasing experience will naturally become richer.

Second, we anticipate improvements in sales and operational efficiency. By optimizing our brand lineup, we expect stronger sales productivity, and efficient use of space will bring positive results on the operational side as well.

Third, we aim to further strengthen the identity of JDC Duty-free Shop. As a public corporation representing Jeju's duty-free sector, we plan to broaden our selection of brands that customers have consistently favored through our pop-up stores, and we will reposition key K-brands at the forefront. This will help us become more than just a duty-free shop and serve as a platform that offers visitors the final memorable chapter of their Jeju journey.

JDC Duty-free Shop has reached its twenty-third anniversary. Could you tell us about some of the key changes and achievements over the past 23 years?

JDC Duty-free Shop opened in 2002 as the first duty-free shop located inside a domestic terminal. Over the past twenty-three years, it has played a foundational role in strengthening Jeju's tourism competitiveness and securing financial resources for the Free International City initiative. JDC Duty-free Shop opened in 2002 as the first duty-free shop located inside a domestic terminal. Over the past twenty-three years, it has played a foundational role in strengthening Jeju's tourism competitiveness and securing financial resources for the Free International City initiative.

So operationally, we kept working to make the operation more competitive by expanding from the central store to the east and west stores, improving customer flow, and diversifying our product lineup. Our Jeju Airport location has grown into the most-visited duty-free destination for domestic travelers and now serves as the core of designated duty-free shops. During the COVID-19 period, Jeju travel

What direction should JDC Duty-free Shop take in the future?

As we move forward, I think JDC Duty-free Shop needs to enhance the customer experience by embracing AI-driven innovation, going beyond basic digital transformation. It will be important to strengthen an omnichannel shopping environment that fits new consumer trends, such as mobile pre-orders, in-store digital and AI features, and personalized information services based on purchase history.

We also need to expand product strategies that highlight Jeju's unique identity. That includes Jeju-themed branded items, local products, and more experiential content. We want the visit to be a memorable one, so we are focusing on giving customers more direct experiences like scent testing or tasting. That way, stopping by JDC Duty-free Shop at the end of a Jeju trip feels like part of the journey instead of just another quick shopping stop.

Ultimately, JDC Duty-free Shop should keep moving in a direction that is smarter, more authentically Jeju, and more customer-focused. By doing so, we aim to continue creating new value and contributing to Jeju's tourism and the local economy as one of the island's leading public brands. 🌊

Communicating the JDC Way JDC Wins Excellence Award at the 2025 Korea Social Media Awards

Jeju Free International City Development Center (JDC) received the Excellence Award in the Public Institution category at the 2025 Korea Social Media Awards. The recognition highlights JDC's reputation in Korea for breaking away from the rigid image often associated with public institutions and engaging in genuine, accessible communication with the public.

Setting New Standards for Communication

The Korea Social Media Awards, organized by the Korea Social Content Promotion Association, is regarded as Korea's most prestigious program evaluating how effectively organizations use social media and communicate with the public. The evaluation focuses not on the volume of content produced, but on how genuinely an organization engages with people and builds real connection.

This year, JDC was honored as a top-performing institution for its distinctive content planning and proactive approach to public engagement.

JDC has stepped away from the traditional, one-directional communication style often associated with public institutions. Instead of simply pushing out information, it has created genuine two-way communication opportunities where the public can participate and connect. JDC has broadened its communication efforts through diverse content, including transparent updates on Free International City projects, stories highlighting cooperation with Jeju's local communities, and engaging content that showcases Jeju's hidden charms.

JDC will continue to put communication with the public at the forefront and aims to grow as a public institution that leads digital innovation.

A Special English Classroom Where Global Dreams Take Root Jeju International School English Camp

Click Here!

For the past ten years, JDC's Jeju International School English Camp has offered Jeju students a unique learning opportunity, and it returns once again this year. Held at Saint Johnsbury Academy Jeju from November 17 to 21, 2025.

In an international school environment that students rarely get to experience, they get comfortable using English while developing creativity and communication skills. This special program has become a meaningful space for Jeju children to broaden their perspectives and build confidence.

The Beginning of Global Education Open to All

Jeju Global Education City was established in 2009 as a national project aimed at meeting the demand for early overseas study within Korea and nurturing globally minded professionals. While it succeeded in reducing the need for costly overseas education, it also came to be viewed by some as an elite, high-cost school model because of its tuition.

To address this, JDC launched an English camp in 2015 that draws on the strong academic programs and teaching staff of the international schools. The camp opened meaningful opportunities for students across Jeju, including those from underserved backgrounds, to experience an international school environment at a much lower cost. It marked an important step in making the Global Education City a place of learning that is truly open to everyone.

Fall 2025: A Special Week for 240 Students

From November 17 to 21, this year's fall English camp welcomed 240 sixth-grade students from across Jeju. The selected participants, including students from underserved backgrounds, spent five full days on the international school campus, taking part in a wide range of English-based programs from 8:55 AM to 5:15 PM each day.

STEAM Science Exploration track

Most importantly, this year’s camp was shaped by direct feedback from last year’s students, parents, and teachers. The curriculum was rebuilt around the programs that received the strongest satisfaction scores in the 2024 survey, and each class was extended from 45 minutes to 90 minutes. Popular sessions such as “Cake Decorating,” “Escape Room Challenge,” and “Team Sports” were upgraded and expanded, and the response from students was overwhelmingly positive.

The twelve courses, organized into four learning tracks, reflected the wide range of students’ interests. In the STEAM track, students strengthened their creative problem-solving skills through Makerspace, Coding, and Science Exploration. The Creativity and Adventure track offered Escape Room Challenge, Cake Decorating, and Cooking and Baking, where students practiced collaboration and a spirit of challenge.

Cake Decorating

The Visual and Performing Arts (VAPA) track, with English karaoke, instrumental music, and 2D art, helped students build confidence and express themselves more freely. Through the Physical Fitness and Sports track, including swimming, team sports, and dance, students stayed active while developing strong teamwork.

Each student took part in all twelve courses over the five days. Since teams of about twenty students rotated to a different class each day, many ended up discovering talents they hadn't noticed before or found themselves getting interested in completely new areas.

Throughout the program, twenty-four teachers from the three JEINS international schools (SJA Jeju, NLCS Jeju, and BHA) led the classes, and about thirty assistant team leaders provided interpretation support so students could participate without worrying about language barriers.

On the final day of camp, the students visited the Jeju Aerospace Museum for an off-campus learning experience.

The participation fee of KRW 1.25 million per student, which covered tuition, materials, meals, snacks, and transportation, was fully funded by JDC. The three hundred-million-won program was JDC's way of giving Jeju students access to a global learning environment without placing a financial burden on families. 🍃

Jeju International School English Camp A Decade-long Journey

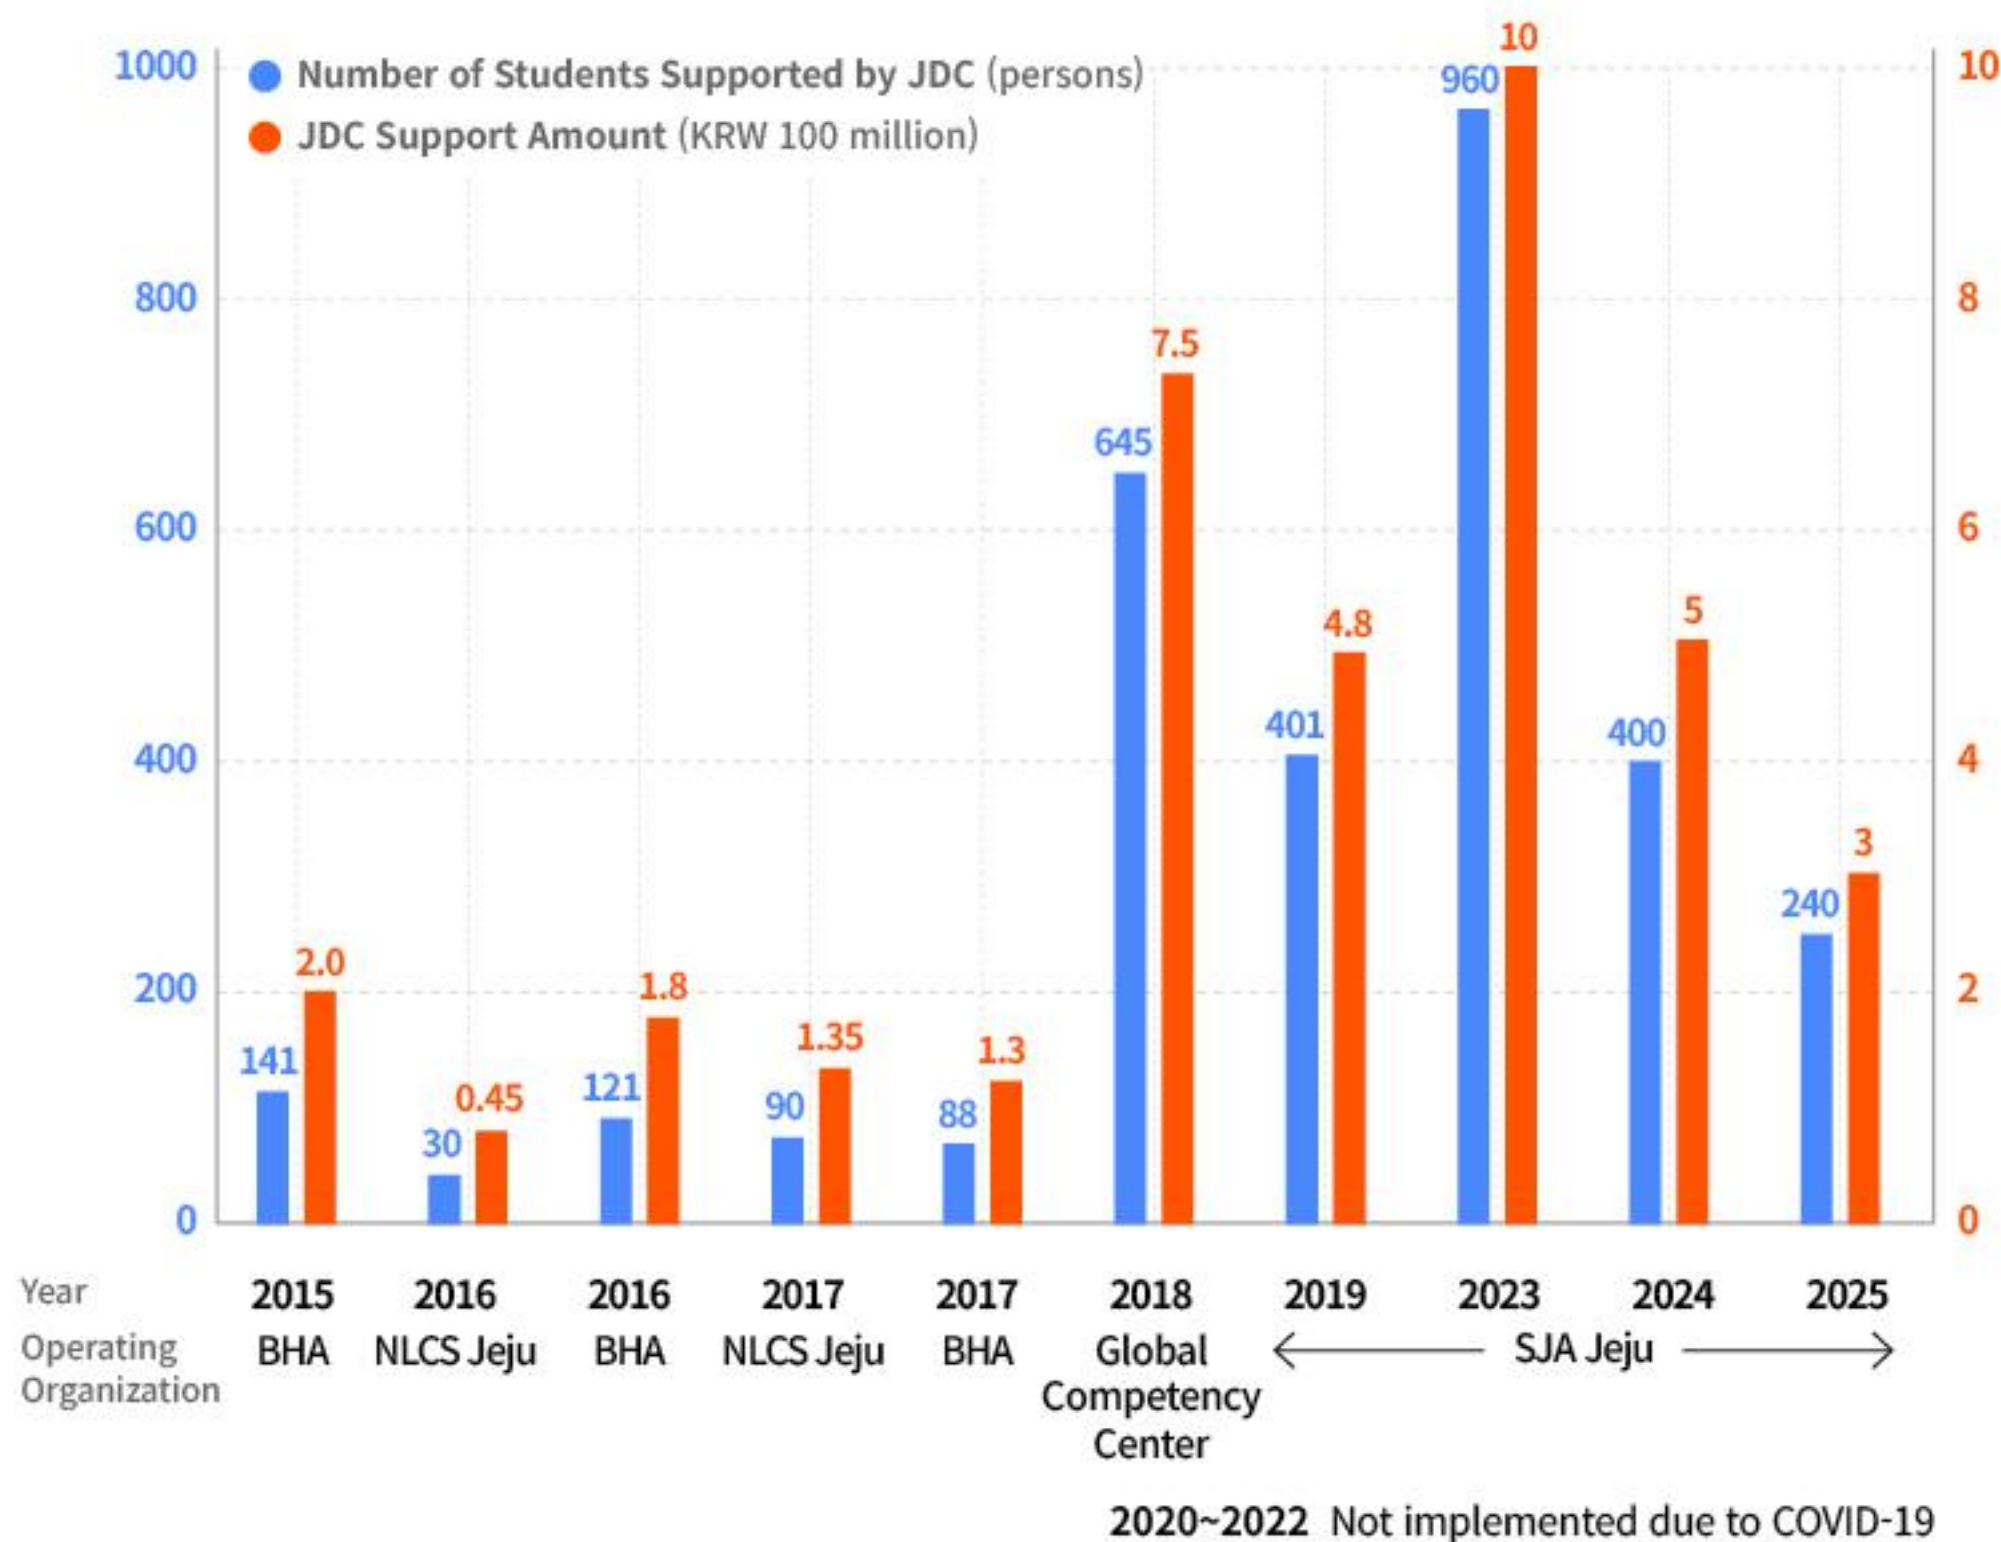

Jeju International School English Camp is more than a language program. It gives students a chance to learn how to communicate with the world and grow in a global setting.

A Decade of Growth, Reaching 3,116 Students

Since beginning with one hundred forty-one students in 2015, the Jeju International School English Camp has supported 3,116 students over the past decade, providing a total of KRW 3.72 billion in camp funding. It has become a steady pillar of global education for Jeju’s youth.

An English Camp Turning Local Students into Global Talent

Kim Ki-young,
CEO of JEINS

JEINS, a JDC subsidiary that operates Jeju International Schools, has grown into a leading hub for nurturing global talent over the past 15 years. Each year, more than half of its roughly 300 graduates advance to universities ranked within the global top 100. Since 2015, JEINS has also contributed to the local community by operating the Jeju International School English Camp for the past 10 years.

Hello, Mr. Kim.

Could you introduce yourself and JEINS?

Hello. I'm Kim Ki-young, CEO of the international school corporation JEINS. I joined JDC in 2005, and from May 2008 to June 2010, I worked on project and development planning for the establishment of Global Education City, including permit approvals, site preparation, and the NLCS Jeju design process. Starting in 2023, I served for about two years as the head of the department overseeing Global Education City, and since May 2025, I have been serving as CEO of the international school corporation JEINS.

JEINS was established in June 2010 as a subsidiary of JDC and currently operates three international schools in Global Education City: NLCS Jeju, BHA, and SJA Jeju. Today, we have about 3,200 students and 900 faculty and staff. Our mission is to nurture global talent so that Jeju International School students can use Jeju as a stepping stone to enter the global stage and fully develop their abilities.

JEINS has extensive experience operating international schools. Could you tell us about the achievements of Jeju International Schools over the years?

It's been 15 years since JEINS began operating international schools, starting with the opening of NLCS Jeju in Global Education City in 2011. We had our first graduating class of 55 students in 2014, and today about 300 students graduate each year and move on to the global stage as future talent.

In concrete terms, more than half of our graduates go on to universities ranked within the global top 100, including Ivy League and Oxbridge institutions. One notable achievement is that NLCS Jeju's 2025 graduating class recorded an average IBDP* score of 37 out of 45, ranking first in Korea and 55th worldwide among roughly 4,000 IBDP schools.

*IBDP is the high school program of IB, an international standard curriculum that evaluates critical thinking and analytical skills through common essay-based assessments worldwide each year.

The Jeju International School English Camp began in 2015 and has now been running for 10 years.

Could you tell us what led to its launch and what the major achievements have been?

Jeju Global Education City was created as part of a national project launched in the early 2000s to address the social costs and issues that arose as early overseas study became more common. Because of this, there was criticism that it served only a small group of students. To dispel that criticism and to contribute to the local community, we launched the Jeju International School English Camp, which makes use of the international schools' strong educational programs, facilities, and faculty.

From 2015 to this year, a total of 3,116 students have taken part in the English camp with support from JDC. By reorganizing and improving the program each year based on feedback, we have consistently achieved participant satisfaction scores above 95, along with continued positive reviews from parents.

Above all, I believe the most meaningful achievement is the expansion of an educational environment where students learn and grow together. Many international school students now volunteer for the camp with a sense of responsibility toward the local community, and that development is one of its greatest outcomes.

Moving forward, what positive changes or effects do you hope to see for the local community or participating students through the Jeju International School English Camp?

Moving forward, I expect the Jeju International School English Camp to serve as a gateway that offers students broader perspectives and a stronger sense of global awareness. Through activities with faculty members from various nationalities, students will be exposed to cultural diversity and different ways of thinking.

We will also work more closely with the local community and continue promoting the English camp, focusing on expanding opportunities for students to experience world-class education while staying in Jeju. After each camp, we will keep improving the program's diversity and quality based on feedback from participating students, parents, and other stakeholders, so that students can continue building their global competencies.

Finally, what direction and vision should Jeju International Schools pursue going forward?

The educational capabilities that Jeju International Schools have built since opening are now becoming visible as graduates begin entering society.

As more of our graduates excel at universities around the world and in global industries, I believe the schools need to further establish themselves as hubs that develop future global leaders. To do this, beyond academic achievement alone, the schools should develop mid- to long-term strategies for talent development, including systematic career support and broader collaboration with multinational companies and research institutions, so that our graduates can strengthen Korea's global competitiveness.

Recently, JEINS signed an MOU with KAIST to provide hands-on education in robotics, AI, and engineering, and this is part of that plan. Building on Jeju's infrastructure as an international education city, the schools should clearly present a vision of contributing to national-level talent development, while reinforcing both their public mission and their forward-looking values.

Warm Winds Reaching Island Villages

Click Here!

Last October and November, as the weather turned noticeably colder, a warm wave of support reached the island villages of Udo and Chujado. A social contribution network led by the Jeju Provincial Council on Social Welfare, with participation from JDC, the Korea Racing Authority, Jeju National University Hospital, and others, carried out community outreach activities for residents in these remote island areas. This warm journey toward the island communities across the sea marked the beginning of a better tomorrow that the broader Jeju community is building together.

Welcome to Udo Returns

On October 30, about 60 volunteers and partner companies in the Jeju social contribution network carried out the “Welcome to Udo Returns” event across Udo. They visited 120 households of seniors living alone and low-income families in Udo-myeon, delivering food boxes prepared by the Jeju Special Self-Governing Province Regional Food Bank together with participating social contribution companies, sharing warmth and care with the community. Members of the Volunteer Association and representatives from participating companies also visited housing-vulnerable households and supported home-improvement efforts, including wallpapering, repairing floors, and cleaning. Meanwhile, Udo Elementary School hosted the JDC Aerospace Museum’s “Udo Embracing the Stars” program. All 38 students took part in science activities themed around aviation and space, along with a resin craft session. Connecting with the 6th-grade science unit “Solar System and Stars,” they learned about seasonal changes and how constellations move, then used non-toxic UV resin to create their own constellation trays based on cosmic designs. JDC assigned one museum operations staff member, three Dream Sharing Volunteer Corps members, and one external instructor to run the program by grade level.

At Udo Gymnasium, Jeju National University Hospital and the Korea Association of Health Promotion Jeju Branch provided on-site medical services for five hours, including blood pressure and blood sugar checks, and brain-wave and pulse-wave screenings. The Volunteer Association assisted elderly residents who had difficulty traveling from gathering points to the clinic. One program that drew especially positive feedback was “Dol:Abom Photo Studio,” which took instant photos of senior residents under the theme “Looking back, today was the most beautiful.” In addition, the Korea Racing Authority Jeju Headquarters and participating social contribution companies joined local volunteer groups and the Residents’ Self-Governing Committee for a one-hour coastal cleanup along Udo’s shoreline.

Ieum Jobs and JDC Join Hands for Yerae

How Ieum Jobs and JDC Show Their Love for Yerae

On November 3, JDC carried out the “Ieum Jobs and JDC Love Yerae” initiative. For two hours, volunteers cleaned the coastline from Daepyeong Port to Yerae Port, helping protect Jeju’s natural environment.

The activity was organized in connection with JDC’s Ieum Jobs program and carried out in collaboration with the Seogwipo Senior Club, the Korea Elder Human Resources Development Institute Jeju Regional Headquarters, the Labor-Management Development Foundation Jeju Middle-Aged Tomorrow Center, the Daepyeong-ri Village Association, and Ieum Jobs partners. This joint volunteer effort between JDC and local organizations created an opportunity to build a stronger sense of community and bring local residents closer together.

Welfare Up GO, Happiness Up GO, Let's Dance in Chuja Event

Carrying Welfare and Happiness, 'Let's Dance in Chuja'

On November 7, Chuja-myeon hosted the “Welfare Up GO, Happiness Up GO, Let's Dance in Chuja” event. A total of 50 people took part, including 30 participants from social contribution companies, 10 council representatives, and 6 members of the Volunteer Association. The Chujado program was carried out in three stages.

On October 28, the “Food Donation Day” program was held first, during which 200 food packages were prepared and donated together with the Jeju Credit Union Two Hands Together Volunteer Corps. From November 6 to 7, volunteers visited 120 vulnerable households in Chuja-myeon to deliver the food packages as part of on-site Food Bank outreach efforts. On November 7, various welfare services were offered at the plaza in front of the Chuja-myeon Office and at the Chuja-myeon Community Welfare Center. At the health consultation booths, residents received brain-wave, pulse-wave, and stress screenings, while the Volunteer Association carried out home-improvement support for households with poor living conditions. The Chuja-myeon Community Security Council operated a laundry assistance program for seniors, and a “Life Four Cuts” instant-photo booth was also available. In addition, volunteers conducted coastal cleanup activities along the shoreline roads of Chuja-myeon, joining efforts to help protect Jeju’s clean ocean. The sharing activities carried out in Udo and Chujado were promoted as a joint initiative that connected the professional resources of companies participating in the Jeju social contribution network. These efforts helped address the diverse welfare needs of residents in island communities, delivered social value through corporate social contribution activities, and strengthened cooperation among local residents, private organizations, and public institutions. In particular, the participation of the JDC Dream Sharing Volunteer Corps reflected a concrete step in practicing ESG management. The positive changes created by the warm support shown toward island residents are contributing to a better future for the Jeju community. 🌊

Keeping People Safe, Keeping Jeju Safe

Creating a better Jeju begins when people and technology come together in the field. After the strong commitment to preventing industrial accidents was affirmed at the Cabinet meeting on July 5, 2025, JDC has been working to prevent workplace accidents by applying advanced technology and building a people-centered management system, helping spread the importance of safety across the island.

Messages Delivered Through Safety Campaign Videos

JDC has begun producing public safety campaign videos to share the message that “safety is the foundation of a sustainable tomorrow.” The five videos, scheduled for completion in mid-November, are created not by listing instructions but by using a storytelling format that connects everyday situations with safety practices in a way that feels seamless and relatable.

Two main videos deliver JDC’s core message that safety is the organization’s top priority, while three site-specific videos highlight actual safety practices at the Second Jeju Advanced Science and Technology Park, the Jeju Aerospace Museum, and the JDC Duty-free Shop.

JDC Public Safety Campaign Video

The videos incorporate a range of visual elements such as drone footage, motion graphics, and typography, and blend infographics with live-action shots to create content designed to be engaging and easy for viewers to relate to.

These videos will continue to be shared through national broadcasting and media outlets, as well as online platforms including YouTube and social media, and through media channels at each JDC workplace.

The goal is to support the government's efforts to promote a culture of safety, establish clear examples of ESG-based safety practices, and help raise public awareness of safety.

Building Safe Construction Sites with Advanced Technology

At the site preparation area of the Second Jeju Advanced Science and Technology Park, the workday begins at 7:20 each morning, when workers pick up their hard hats and gather for the daily Tool Box Meeting. Instead of simply reviewing instructions, they warm up together to prepare both physically and mentally.

Drones then take to the air above the large construction site.

They inspect blind spots that are difficult for workers to reach, helping ensure safety in hazardous areas. This is where advanced technology becomes a dependable safeguard for the people on-site. Inside the training facility, another shift is taking place. Workers wearing VR headsets experience simulated hazards such as falls, dropped objects, and fires. By confronting risks that are hard to encounter in real life, they strengthen their safety awareness and improve their ability to respond. On-site CPR training tailored to field conditions is also an essential part of the program, providing practical preparation for emergencies and supporting the broader culture of safety.

Creating Safe Spaces Together with Visitors

At the Jeju Aerospace Museum, safety is upheld even in places visitors never see. Beneath aircraft suspended high above the floor, inspectors ride aerial lifts to closely examine cables and connection fixtures. These routine inspections prevent exhibits from falling and keep visitors safe.

The fire evacuation drills are just as striking. In smoke-filled exhibition areas, staff wearing protective masks move calmly into fire response teams. It is the result of repeated training that reduces panic and ensures everyone knows their role. The museum also offers CPR training for visitors. From checking safety nets to monitoring the fire control room's CCTV system, the team maintains a tight safety system so that children's play areas remain a place for worry-free experiences.

JDC Safety Campaign Video for the Designated Duty-free Shop

A Safe Shopping Environment for Customers and Employees

Inside the JDC Duty-free Shop's bonded warehouse, an alarm sounds from a worker's wristband before a forklift starts moving. It's the pedestrian-detection system stepping in to prevent a collision. A signaler in a blue vest guides the movement with hand signals, helping maintain a safe logistics flow.

Inside the store, safety reminders are projected by laser onto the ramped floor, alerting pedestrians right away and preventing trip-and-fall accidents. Three-person teams moving roll containers work together to reduce the risk of tipping or collisions on slopes and in crowded sections.

The duty-free shop's safety campaign also reaches customers. In front of the JDC Duty-free Shop sign, tourists take part in CPR training. As employees watch with a smile, it becomes clear that safety here is not just a requirement but something everyone builds together.

From places that aren't visible to moments no one anticipates, JDC is creating an environment people can rely on, through proactive prevention and steady, hands-on management that never stops. 🌊

Ha *rin

I love that I can watch the videos too.

Kang *ri

I was really impressed by the article about Jeju Healthcare Town. It is great to see that its vision as a global medical tourism complex is becoming a reality. I also think the roles of the KMI Korea Medical Institute Jeju Health Screening Center and the Korea Human Resources Development Institute for Health and Welfare are especially important. With advanced medical services and the development of future professionals, I hope Jeju can grow into a true center for healthcare and welfare. I was also moved to learn that Café I Got Everything provides meaningful jobs for people with severe disabilities. Efforts like these make a real difference in the community and help create an environment where everyone can grow together. I look forward to Jeju Healthcare Town continuing to develop as a place where healing and growth come together. I hope many people can find health and happiness there.

Kim *seok

I hope Jeju Healthcare Town, which now hosts various healthcare institutions including the KMI and the KOHI, continues to move forward with its vision as a global medical tourism complex.

Byeon *seon

I especially enjoyed the section about healthcare.

I hope JDC's leum Jobs project continues to grow and becomes a model for other companies.

Lee *im

I was glad to read the article about the 2025 Senior Employment Week Ceremony. I feel truly proud that JDC's leum Jobs project, a program that represents Jeju so well, received the award. When I think about it, JDC has grown into more than a company. It has become a dependable presence that works toward a happier future together with everyone in the community, including marginalized neighbors and older residents, rather than focusing only on its own progress. I hope JDC continues this warm, supportive work and stands tall like Hallasan as a distinguished Jeju company loved by its citizens.

Kim *gyeong

After reading the article, I was reminded once again of how important senior employment is in an aging society. It is unfortunate that the skills and wisdom of older adults are not fully utilized. I hope JDC's leum Jobs Project becomes a strong model that helps connect the potential of seniors to meaningful growth in the local community.

I enjoyed the Clean Jeju "Sseudam Sseudam" column because it gave me a hopeful look at a cleaner and brighter future for Jeju. Knowing that young people in Jeju are taking the lead in protecting the island and sharing that journey with marginalized neighbors truly brings a smile to my face. It reminds me once again that clean Jeju is, without a doubt, a model city for sustainable communities in Korea. :)
